

Top Ten Photos of 2015

kevinmay.com

If you're wanting snow, they've got it up in Fredricton, Canada! I was up there shooting Cat motor graders pushing snow in February and I can tell you it was damn cold!

This is one of Jan's photos from April at the Oklahoma City Memorial in OKC. The Gates of Time are at each end of the reflecting pool and this Eastern gate marks the last moment of peace before the moment of destruction that started at 9:02. On the Western gate, the time is 9:03 that marks the moment of recovery. A very somber and moving place indeed.

Back in July we were in Idaho Falls, Idaho and came across this man-made dam and I just loved the way the water spilled over the edge.

Jan got this unique view of Peoria in July and shot this photo in a HDR mode (High Dynamic Range) for a special look.

I was able to grab this glorious sunset in Arches National Park in Moab, Utah in February.

In February we were traveling on Rt. 128 in Utah on the road to Moab and Jan captured this shot of Fisher Towers.

Here's one of my shots from April in Durant, Oklahoma at a rock quarry of Billy Maccini for TelSmith.

In November we were out on the East Coast for a shoot and were able to spend a day in Washington D.C. shooting photos for ourselves. I was able to get this photo of Mr. Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial.

On that same November day in Washington D.C., Jan grabbed this photo at the Vietnam Memorial.

We ended up rocking out the year with Greg Webb from "The Rave". I've shot photos of these guys for over 25 years and it's great to see them still kicking it out!

Jan and I had a lot of great shoots this past year and are very blessed to work with so many great clients!!! Join us in 2016 and we're ready to get going and have another banner year!!!